Abstract

Gender Empowerment Measuring is the indicator that measures female participation in political and economical scenes.

There are two different ideas about the concept of "gender empowerment".(GE) internationally.One is the idea thought by UNDP(United Nation Development Program). They think that gender empowerment can be accomplished by the movement of individual woman in national,formal level. And, they focus on only politics and esonomics.

On the other hand, South women and many feminists claim the importance of national, formal, and , transnatinal, local, informal level. And, they focus on individual women and women in the group. And, they consider not only political, economical aspects , but also social culture asoects.

As above, there are two different ideas about the concept of "gender empowerment(GE)" internationally.

I think that the latter idea suits to modern gender empowerment condition. Gender empowerment in modern times can be seen not only in national, formal level, but also in local,transnational, informal level. And,not only the power of individual women ,but also that of women in the group influence with the process of attainment of gender empowerment.

Considering this trend, the present GEM made by UNDP is not so enough to measure the condition of gender empowerment adequately. So, in this essay, I focus on the group activities in local, informal levels. And, I focus on political gender empowerment this time.

Concretely, I make two types of new GEMs. One is the indicator that is added the number of women act in local level as a component. Another is the indicator that is added the number of women groups and informal aspects.By using these two indicators, I can measure gender empowerment condition in modern times more realisticly ,and more adequately.

In this essay, I think that these new GEMs can measure gender empowerment more realistic than the present GEM. And, can suggest another, and original thought about the gender empowerment condition by seeing the transition between the present GEM and new GEMs. This point is my purpose of my essay.
