1. About Admissions

1) Admissions Policy

The Graduate School of Economics conducts entrance examinations with a view to selecting students who are interested not only in real issues of politics, economics, society, and the historical roots thereof, but also in examining such issues from a theoretical viewpoint. Students are expected to have knowledge of real-life society and historical facts from the past to the present. They are expected to understand the importance of logical thinking and to be willing to proactively challenge the mathematical and statistical methodologies that are central to economic theory.

The School recognizes, however, that it may not always be possible for prospective students to meet all of its expectations at the point of enrollment. Screenings at the Graduate School of Economics are therefore conducted with sensitive consideration to the selection of candidates with varied interests, so as to give members of the student body the opportunity to influence one another, while each individual develops his/her strong points, concurrently advancing towards realistic perceptions and a logical approach to thinking.

Today, politics and economics are recognized as being intricately related to each other in many of the most significant social issues of the day, making it difficult to achieve a fundamental resolution without a combination of Political Science and Economics. The Graduate School of Economics welcomes students who are interested in any field exhibiting a mutual relationship between political and economic concerns, such as government, national institutions, and international relationships, and who wish to examine—and find solutions for—various issues in the field, taking full advantage of both Economics and Political Science.
