SUMMER INSTITUTE ON PEACEBUILDING & CONFLICT RESOLUTION (IPCR) 2006 -
BOLIVIA & INDONESIA

The Alliance for Conflict Transformation (ACT) is pleased to announce the Summer Institute on Peacebuilding & Conflict Resolution (IPCR). IPCR is an intensive 3-week residential program intended to build the capacity of current and future professionals in a variety of fields to make a critical difference in furthering peaceful relations in the world.

The course is offered in two locations to best meet your needs and Interests as follows:

- Santa Cruz, Bolivia: June 10 - July 1, 2006
- Jakarta, Indonesia: July 22 - August 12, 2006

We are currently accepting applications for participation from English speaking professionals, graduate and upper-level undergraduate students in peace and conflict resolution, international affairs, political science, Latin American studies, anthropology, development and related fields.

AT IPCR, students enjoy a supportive learning environment where Experienced trainers and faculty combine brief lectures, case studies, field trips, role-plays, simulations, and field work with the experiences of local and international peacebuilding practitioners.

IPCR offers a stimulating integration of theory and practice, bringing together innovative academic analysis with practical, hands-on training and skills development. Participants will learn about these topics and more:

- Conflict analysis & assessment
- Conflict resolution and peacebuilding practices
- Cross-sectoral approaches to peacebuilding and conflict resolution (i.e., with development, human rights, etc)
- Post-conflict reconstruction and reconciliation
- Skills development in negotiation, mediation, facilitation, project design, and evaluation
- Case studies at the community, national and international level, Latin America, Asia and other regions
- Careers in peacebuilding and conflict resolution

In addition to gaining a basic understanding of conflict analysis and a set of practical skills applicable to a variety of fields, I truly benefited from having access to real-world practitioners and the exposure to an insider's view of regional conflicts. IPCR is practical, hands-on, and highly recommended for anyone interested in pursuing a professional career in conflict resolution, peacebuilding, or related fields. Gender Myths, Gender Meanings:

An Interdisciplinary Graduate Conference
On Gender in East, South and Southeast Asia
Harvard April 28-29th 2006

The conference will address gender issues as they relate to East, South and Southeast Asia, with priority given to theoretically aware approaches.

The conference is intended to enable scholars and researchers in a variety of fields to communicate across disciplinary boundaries so as to provide mutual awareness of ideas, issues and data in a more rich and productive way. All topics and theoretical ideas are welcomed. Postdocs and grad students are encouraged to submit abstracts of maximum 300 words to the organizers by February 24th 2006. Notification of acceptance will be made by March 3rd. Please send abstracts (and any questions) to: Nick Tustin at ntustin@fas.harvard.edu. Abstracts must include: your name, department, academic institution, contact information, working title, and summary of your paper in a maximum of 300 words. Presentation time will be 15 minutes.

Theoretical basis of the conference:

Gender Myths, Gender Meanings. How much of gender is a myth, especially when considered within another society? How much of gender is a meaning, in the sense of praxis that possesses significance within political, social, legal, and interpersonal frameworks? In viewing East, South, or Southeast Asian society and their diaspora communities from a Western academic perspective, are we just re-inventing an Asian version of ourselves? What is the role of indigenous scholarship that emerges from a non-Western paradigm? In what ways is it useful or helpful to theorize gender? Can we even talk of gender as a single unitary concept? Should we engage in recuperative history without first re-evaluating our own theoretical perspectives?

A key aim of this conference is to promote dialogue between the diverse disciplines in the Humanities and Social Sciences that engage in the study of gender in East, South and Southeast Asia and their related diaspora communities. This is an emerging field of considerable potential significance rather than a fully established discipline, and as such, requires an extended theoretical debate to strengthen and augment its range of critical and theoretical tools.

We hope to create a conference with as much diversity as possible, so we are open to a full range of topics across the humanities and social sciences, provided that it relates to any of the countries in our geographical range -- for example Indonesia, the Philippines, India, China, Japan, or Korea and their diaspora communities. If you are unsure whether we might include your country, just ask! Please submit questions (and abstracts) to ntustin@fas.harvard.edu. Note that the deadline for submitting abstracts is February 24th 2006.

International Migration, Ethnic Diversity and Cities

We are pleased to let you know that the Summer Institute on International Migration, Ethnic Diversity and Cities 2006 will be held for the third time this Summer, from June 11th-29th at the International School for Humanities and Social Sciences, Universiteit van Amsterdam. The Summer Institute on International Migration, Ethnic Diversity and Cities is a three-week programme, which seeks to explore the topical features of international migration and the incorporation of immigrants in the cities and states of destination. The themes of the seminar will be approached in an international comparative way, building on theoretical and empirical contributions of sociologists, political scientists, anthropologists, geographers, economists, philosophers and historians. The Institute is open to advanced undergraduate, graduate and post-graduate students as well as professionals working in a field related to the topic of the Summer Institute.

SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM. Students from 57 countries are now eligible to attend the Summer Institute under the NUFFIC SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM for short courses. Please tell your colleagues and students about this. The NUFFIC deadline is February 1, 2006, and before applying to NUFFIC, students must apply to the Summer Institute and be accepted. We stand ready to expedite these applications during January, so please share the news and encourage potential participants to apply quickly. We hope this scholarship goes a long way in making the Summer Institute more accessible to students from the global south.

IMISCOE TRAINING GRANT. PhD candidates who are member of the IMISCOE Network of Excellence are eligible for an IMISCOE Training Grant.

WEBSITE: <http://www.hpair2006.org>

FINAL APPLICATION DEADLINE: March 15th, 2006

The Harvard Project for Asian and International Relations (HPAIR) invites you to participate in our annual summer student conference in Asia.

HPAIR is a partnership between the students and faculty of Harvard University, offering a sustained academic program and a forum of exchange to facilitate discussion of the most important economic, political, and social issues relevant to the Asia-Pacific region.

HPAIR's international conference has emerged as the largest annual Harvard event in Asia and the largest annual student conference in the Asia-Pacific region, attracting a wide variety of distinguished speakers and future leaders as Harvard's student outpost in Asia. Past speakers at our conferences include South Korean President Kim Young Sam, Governor General of Australia Peter Hollingworth, Singapore President S.R. Nathan and Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad.

Both delegates and papers are welcome! Applications for both are online and located at www.hpair2006.org.

The theme will be Redefining Asia: Visions and Realities

WORKSHOP TOPICS

Our HPAIR 2006 workshops will focus on the following six topics:

-The Political Economies of China and India: Trends, Trade and Tomorrow's Asia

- Environmental Management in Asia: Writing Tomorrow's Textbooks Now
- Diseases and Disparities: Improving Health Outcomes for All
- Impersonating Asia: Performing Arts and Film in Contemporary Perspectives
- Boundaries in Flux: Religion, Nation, and Identity in Asia
- War, Domestic Conflict, and Interdependence: Peace and Security in East Asia

2006年6月 ワシントン大学 夏季セミナー「理論モデルの経験的含意」

Empirical Implications of Theoretical Models (EITM) Summer Institute
2006

Washington University's Weidenbaum Center and Dept. of Political Science is sponsoring a summer institute on the problems of testing Theoretical models of politics. The institute is designed for advanced graduate students and junior faculty whose research and teaching would benefit from training seminars on the link between methods of empirical Analysis and theoretical models. Seminars combine both theory and method and several seminars address major substantive fields of application.

Each of the NSF-EITM Summer Institutes is comprised of five seminars taught over the course of three weeks. The instructors and subjects addressed in the advanced seminars rotate over the four-year period of the program, allowing students to attend more than one institute. All seminars will be held on the campus of Washington University in St.Louis.

The application deadline for this year is February 15, 2006. We strongly encourage you to visit our website at <http://wc.wustl.edu/eitm> for more detailed information on how to apply, seminar topics, seminar instructors, and housing opportunities in St. Louis for the three week program. Students accepted into the program will receive a $1,000 stipend towards the cost of travel, lodging, and food.

Summer Course on Refugee Issues

The Summer Course on Refugee Issues, Centre for Refugee Studies, York University,
Toronto June 10 - 18, 2006

The Summer Course on Refugee Issues held by the Centre for Refugee Studies at York University is an internationally acclaimed 8-day training for academic and field-based practitioners working in the area of forced migration. The course involves a rigorous schedule of lectures, panels and discussions, and a simulation exercise. The course draws from academic and field-based experts for its faculty and, reflecting the Centre mission, serves as a hub for researchers, students, service providers and policy makers to share information and ideas.

A preliminary list* of topics for the 2006 Summer Course includes:

- The convention refugee definition
- Cross-national comparisons of asylum policies
- The UNHCR
- The UN Human Rights Commission
- International and local advocacy networks and mechanisms
- Globalization and forced migration
- National borders and security policies
- Trafficking, smuggling, organized crime
- Public health responses to refugee crises
- Psychological care and psychosocial interventions
- Internally Displaced Persons
- Transnationalism and identity
- Repatriation and post-conflict reconstruction
- Sanctuary

*Please refer to www.yorku.ca/crs for updates.

As a part of the course, simulated refugee hearings will be held at the Immigration and Refugee Board Toronto. In this intensive exercise, course participants will be assigned roles to carry out mock refugee hearings. The goal of the exercise is to develop an understanding of the different duties and obstacles faced by each participant in the hearing. The simulation exercise is closely modeled on the framework of the Canadian refugee determination system.

In 2006, the Summer Course on Refugee Issues will be held the week before the Annual International Association for the Study of Forced Migration conference, which is being hosted by the Centre for Refugee Studies. This makes June a very exciting time to be at York University. For more information pertaining to the IASFM conference, please go to: <http://www.iasfm.org/pages/11/index.htm>

Course fees for the Summer Course on Refugee Issues

Course Fee: $850. After March 31, 2006: $950

Sponsored applicants may be eligible for the $850 fee past March 31 if proof of sponsorship is provided before this date. Fee includes course and all course materials. Food and accommodation are not included. A limited number of tuition subsidies are available.
