The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars is the official memorial to the 28th president of the United States. It is a living memorial that is partially funded by Congress, and attracts some of the best and brightest scholars and experts from around the world. Their work is the centerpiece of our activity and informs the nation's public policy debates with nonpartisan and relevant research and information. The Wilson Center is the top "Think Tank To Watch" in the United States, according to the University of Pennsylvania's annual survey of global think tanks, and is ranked one of the world's top ten think tanks.

Mark L. Haas is a Professor in the Political Science Department and the Graduate Center for Social and Public Policy at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh. He formerly was a National Security Fellow at the Olin Institute for Strategic Studies and an International Security Fellow at the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs, both at Harvard University. Haas received his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Virginia and his B.A. in political science, economics, and history from Duke University. He is the author of The Clash of Ideologies: Middle Eastern Politics and American Security (Oxford University Press, 2012); The Ideological Origins of Great Power Politics, 1789-1989 (Cornell University Press, 2005), and co-editor of The Middle East and the United States: History, Politics, and Ideologies (Westview Press 2012, fifth edition) and The Arab Spring: Change and Resistance in the Middle East (Westview Press, 2013). Haas's scholarly articles have appeared in such journals as International Security, International Organization, International Studies Quarterly, Security Studies, and The Review of Politics, and his opinion pieces have been published in The New York Times, The Boston Globe, The International Tribune Review, and The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Andrew L. Oros is Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of International Studies at Washington College in Chestertown, Maryland, USA. A specialist in the international and comparative politics of East Asia, he is author of Normalizing Japan: Politics, Identity, and the Evolution of Security Practice (Stanford University Press, 2008), co-author of Global Security Watch: Japan (Praeger Press, 2010), and numerous articles and book chapters on Japanese politics and East Asian security. He earned his Ph.D in political science at Columbia University, conducting his doctoral research based at the University of Tokyo. From January – August 2014, Oros was on sabbatical leave based at the East-West Center in Washington where he was working to complete a book manuscript entitled Japan's Security Renaissance that is likely to appear in print in early 2016, based in part on research conducted as an invited research fellow at Japan's National Institute of Defense Studies and as a Japan Foundation Abe fellow at Keio University in Tokyo and Peking University in Beijing.
