

Integration of Courses in the Graduate School of Political Science and the Graduate School of Economics (AY 2017)

The Faculty of Political Science and Economics has decided to reorganize its two Courses in the Graduate School of Political Science and the Graduate School of Economics from April 2017 as described below. Please note that the other existing Courses will not be affected by this change.

1. The Global Political Economy Course in the Graduate School of Political Science will be integrated into the Global Political Economy Course in the Graduate School of Economics:

Both Graduate School of Political Science and Graduate School of Economics have been offering the Global Political Economic Course. Each School has been developing an independent curriculum while sharing most of the basic courses. However, we have concluded that we must place more emphasis on economic theory and methodology in order to allow students to develop a basic framework for analyzing and understanding politics and economics, which are inseparable, from an international perspective and thus decided to discontinue the Global Political Economy Course in the Graduate School of Political Science and integrate it into the Global Political Economy Course in the Graduate School of Economics.

2. The Economic Journalism Course in the Graduate School of Economics will be integrated into the Journalism Course in the Graduate School of Political Science. (The Course is offered in Japanese only).

3. Entrance examination application for 2017 admission:

If you were interested in applying for either of the two Courses which will no longer be offered, please note the following:

(1) Those interested in applying for the Global Political Economy Course:

Please apply for the Global Political Economy Course in the Graduate School of Economics.

(2) Those interested in studying journalism specializing in the field of economics:

Please apply for the Journalism Course in the Graduate School of Political Science and register for the “Certified Program (Economics)” after enrollment.
