

Notice to All Students

Examinations will be held according to the scheduled timetable provided separately. Students need to approach these examinations with the proper attitude and a sense of responsibility.

Students caught cheating on these examinations will be harshly punished in accordance with university regulations, including the invalidation of all course work and suspension. This could result in the student not being able to graduate on time.

Students should again review the Notices on Taking an Examination (provided separately).

Dean of the School of Political Science and Economics