Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies

1. Overview of the Curricular Requirements for the “Future Leader’s Program for Regional Governance and Cooperation in Asia”

Students of the “Future Leader’s Program for Regional Governance and Cooperation in Asia” at the Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies are required to take courses according to the diagram below.

Some of the required courses are designed for the “East Asian University Institute (EAUI) for Asian Regional Integration Program (the EAUI Program hereinafter)”. For more details about EAUI Program, please visit http://www.waseda.jp/gsaps/eauui/index\_en.html

Students in the program must familiarize themselves with the requirements above and make a feasible plan for fulfilling them in two years for MA students and three years for PhD students. Each student is responsible for his/her own progress toward completion of the program.

Upon successful completion of the requirements, the students will be awarded “Certificate of Completion Future Leader’s Program for Regional Governance and Cooperation in Asia”.

Note: The PhD students who completed MA program at GSAPS cannot transfer credits from the MA program toward fulfillment of the requirements.

1. Components of Curricular Requirements

A) Future Leader’s Course (FL Course): Regional Governance and Cooperation in Asia

All of the MA students are required to complete the Future Leader’s Course (FL Course). The FL Course is specially designed for Future Leader’s Program students. The course is jointly taught by multiple GSAPS members who will each elaborate on the theme of “Regional Governance and Cooperation in Asia” from their own area of expertise. The syllabus for 2017 AY will be available in mid-March, 2017.

B) Summer School and Winter School

(1) Overview

The Summer School is participated by students and faculty members from all five partner universities and hosted by each of the partner universities of EAUI Program. Waseda students who have completed the entire program will receive official course credits.

The information below has been excerpted from the application guidelines from the past year for your reference. As the contents and terms are subject to change each year, please make sure to consult the application guidelines of the relevant academic year on the EAUI Program website.

Note: Applicants will be screened based on application documents, due to the limited number of available seats.

(2) Expenses for Participation

Participants in the Summer School hosted by a partner school overseas will be responsible for all general expenses such as a round-trip air ticket, accommodation, travel insurance fees, visa application fees and meals. Basically, each applicant must make sure that he/she can cover the whole expenses, but partial subsidies for the participation can be available on competitive basis (as of Sep. 2016). More details will be announced when the application information is released.

No such expenses will be required for the Summer School when it is hosted by GSAPS.
