Summary

UC Davis Division of Continuing and Professional Education (formerly known as UC Davis Extension) proposes a year-long academic study program focused on the general theme of “Culture and Liberal Arts Studies.” The emphasis will be on flexibility in order to allow the participants to explore a wide variety of courses and at a variety of levels of English proficiency and comfort. The program will be patterned after similar programs conducted successfully by UC Davis Division of Continuing and Professional Education for several international universities in recent years. The program will be learner-centered and personalized, with the participants receiving intensive, ongoing counseling and assistance in setting up their individual study plans according to their goals and abilities.

Students in Waseda University’s Thematic Studies Program will study within the broad confines of the University of California, Davis Global Study Program (GSP). The Global Study Program advisors will assist with their campus courses in the liberal arts. The students will be encouraged to take courses related to their fields of study in anthropology, economics, American studies, history, sociology, literature, music, cultural studies, political science, area studies, and others. (Note: Non-degree students at UC Davis must take courses on a space-available basis. Some impacted courses will not be open. Global Study advisors offer hands-on assistance in enrolling Waseda University students in the partial or full-time campus courses. Global Study advisors also provide ongoing academic monitoring and support for Waseda University students.)

In addition to the academic program, the Waseda students will be given opportunities to participate in a variety of university and community activities in order to maximize their integration and to enrich their experiences (see below). UC Davis has recently embarked on an ambitious multi-year globalization campaign as part of its mission. In addition to internationalizing the curriculum and encouraging students and faculty to travel abroad, the university is making a concerted effort to benefit as much as possible from the presence on campus of international students, researchers and scholars. University officials perceive the Waseda CS-R Program as a valuable addition to this process and feel that the university will be enriched by the presence of the Waseda students.

See Attachment A for a summary of the academic program.

Housing and Meal Plan

Waseda students make their own housing arrangements, with guidance from Global Study advisors. Housing options include choosing their own off-campus housing or homestay.

1. Rental Apartments. Some students prefer to secure their own accommodations, perhaps through friends or relatives. The preferred housing website is that sponsored by the Associated Students of UC Davis (ASUCD) <https://chl.ucdavis.edu/>
2. Homestay with a Local Family. Our Housing Office helps individual students with a variety of housing options, including homestay, apartments and dormitories (summers only). If you would like more information or assistance in finding a homestay, please contact us at globalstudy@ucdavis.edu

Students can also reside in on-campus dormitories during the summer. Please note that students must submit individual applications for summer on-campus housing. At present on-campus dormitories are not available during the academic year.

Meal Plans: UC Davis Dining Services offers several meal plan options for off-campus students.

Details can be found at: <http://dining.ucdavis.edu/jointheclub.html>

Opportunities for Learning Through Experience

Waseda students will have many opportunities to interact with other students. Many Japanese students serve as conversation partners to UC Davis students learning Japanese and develop many close friendships in doing so. They also gain academic credit. In addition, they will have the chance to participate in the large and diverse intramural sports programs, and many students will also be eligible to participate in intercollegiate athletics and intramurals. Waseda students can also join one or more of the dozens of student clubs and organizations. For a list of student organizations, visit:

<https://www.ucdavis.edu/campus-life>. The Waseda program coordinator and GSP advisors will assist students in exploring their possibilities and making the necessary contacts.

Waseda students will have access to the campus's excellent sports and recreation facilities for use whenever they like and will be encouraged to join campus sport clubs and other recreational groups.

Students wishing to interact with members of the Davis community can do so as volunteers for many service organizations. For example, the following local organizations are in need of student volunteers: UC Davis Arboretum, Davis Food Closet, Davis Community Meals, Japanese Culture Club, Davis AYSO Soccer League, National Alliance on Mental Illness, and the Yolo County Children's Alliance. Other possibilities exist as well.

Facilitation Plan

Upon their arrival at UC Davis, the Waseda students will undergo a thorough orientation. As this orientation is very important for the integration of the students into the program, the Waseda students are required to attend.

Students will benefit from ongoing academic support and regular individual advising meetings throughout their program at UC Davis.

An advisory committee of UC Davis faculty provides oversight of the academic quality and success of the CS-R Program. These individuals share a strong interest and commitment to creating a strong relationship between Waseda University and UC Davis.

The UC Davis Global Study Team

The Waseda CS-R program is one of several university partnership programs, collectively designated as the Global Study Program. As Director of the Global Study Program at UC Davis, Jacob Hosier will provide oversight of the academic quality of the program. Two program assistants will provide hands-on student support.

ACADEMIC STUDY PROGRAM
2027-2028
Summary

Each student will design an individual study plan for the year in conjunction with the Program Coordinator. The focus in this program is on allowing each student to take regular campus courses at his/her own pace and according to his/her particular subject matter interests. The over-arching theme of “Culture and Liberal Arts Studies” will permit students to enroll in campus courses for academic credit in nearly all academic departments, including anthropology, sociology, American studies, economics, political science, comparative literature, area studies, religious studies, and history. As some courses are impacted with high student demand, all UC Davis students enroll on a space-available basis only.

Fall Quarter:

There are two possible options for study: Open full-time academic study and guided full-time academic study.

Full-time: A typical fall quarter open full-time academic schedule may look like:

Sociology 25: “Sociology of Popular Culture” (OE)	4 units
Asian American Studies 2: “Historical Experiences of Asian Americans”	4 units
Entomology 1: “Art, Science and the World of Insects”	3 units
JPN 192 “Japanese Internship”	1 unit

The courses above are a sample schedule as there are literally thousands of course combinations that students may have in the Global Study Program. Last year, students registered in over 900 courses, in nearly all academic departments across campus. Most campus courses are 4 units, requiring four hours of classroom contact time, either in lectures, smaller seminars or discussion groups. Labs are typically scheduled separately, and for each unit of credit, students will spend 2-3 hours in the lab. The courses above are simply a sample.

Part-time: A typical fall quarter guided academic schedule may look like:

Asian American Studies 2 “Historical Experiences of Asian Americans”	4 units
Sociology 25: “Sociology of Popular Culture”	4 units
Drama 111: “Presentation Skills”	4 units

Winter Quarter:

At the end of the Fall Quarter students who have achieved a high grades (B+ average) in all courses will be eligible for open full-time study in academic courses in the second quarter of study. Students who do not meet this standard will remain in a guided academic schedule.

Spring Quarter:

At the end of the Fall Quarter students who have achieved a high grades (B+ average) in all courses will be eligible for open full-time study in academic courses in the second quarter of study. Students who do not meet this standard will remain in a guided academic schedule.

As stated, the Waseda students (with the approval of a GSP advisor) will be able to modify and adapt them as best suits their skills, interests, and goals. The flexibility of the UC Davis Global Study Program will allow them to advance at a pace which is comfortable to each student.

This proposal does not list the regular campus courses in culture and liberal arts which are available to the Waseda students for the simple reason that it would be very long (literally hundreds of courses). Students will have access – on a space available basis – to any lower division courses that they may wish to take and to upper division courses in fields in which they have done appropriate prior coursework at Waseda University.
